THURSDAY, APRIL 21st, 1887.

Sunday laws are now vigorously enforced in Washington city.

Under Kentucky's new revenue law her common school fund is increased this year $250,000.

Six hundred salt workers are on a strike at Natrona, Pa., and the stove molders of several large cities have struck.

The Louisville Evening Times issued a handsome quadruple edition on last Saturday in the interest of the Kentucky boom.

In the Democratic State convention which meets at Louisville on the 4th, 384 votes will be required to nominate.

The Legislature appropriated $12,000 for a bronze statue of John C. Breckinridge, which will be completed in October.

The remains of President and Mrs. Lincoln have been removed from Springfield, Ill., to a vault in the Lincoln monument.

Secretary Endicott's private secretary, C. S. Sweet, a Republican, has resigned. Mr. Endicott accepts his resignation with much regret.

Hon. Sam E. Hill has withdrawn from the race for Lieutenant Governor, because he has not the time to canvass the State. Mr. Hill was one of the most prominent candidates in the race.

Mr. Carlisle, in an interview at St. Louis, says that the Democrats will certainly carry the country at the next presidential election. He says Mr. Cleveland will, and will be renominated.

Bivouac, a Louisville paper, has many subscribers in the country, with its May number being sold by the company, of New York.

A tornado of Eastern Ohio was reported last Friday by a terrific cyclone. From St. Clairsville across to Wheeling, W. Va., a distance of ten miles, everything in the path of the tornado was carried away.

Order of the State Central Association Conventions will be held at the counties of the State on Saturday, to appoint delegates to the State Convention at Louisville on May 1st.

A plot was hung in a court last week. The plot had been laid and before the case was tried the officers were forewarned and the net was laid in a room in the court house. The job was completed in about two minutes.

Indications suggest that the presidential race in 1888 will be a repetition of that in 1884. It will be Blaine versus Cleveland, and it will end as it did before, except in increase of majority. No power, except God, can force any other result.—Capital.

Who weeps with you when you are sad, and laughs with you when you are glad, and smiles at you when you are mad? The Editor. Who has to be both kind and wise, and now—well hardly ever, lies, and when he does excites surprise? The Editor. Who owns a heart as well as cheek, possessed of spirit proud, yet meek, and lives on forty cents a week? The Editor.—Helm.

The following obituary notice has been suggested as one which would be just the right size for several of our "prominent" citizens: "Beneath this stone there rests a man who'll keep on kicking all he can; he kicked while he remained on earth, commencing at the hour of birth; he kicked so hard, he kicked so high, his kicks would sometimes strike the sky; and when he reaches heaven's gate he'll kick because he never got a kick, and when a sinner says 'Amen', he'll kick because he never said 'Amen'."—Helm.

Martin County Convention.

Pursuant to a call of the Democratic County Committee, a mass Convention was held at the Court House for the purpose of ascertaining whom a majority of the Democratic party of Martin County desired, should represent them in the Kentucky Legislature; at which meeting the following proceedings were had and resolutions entered into:

The meeting was called to order by Hon. A. Lee Barrett and the object of the meeting stated in suitable terms. On motion of T. W. Newberry, Col. J. A. Barrett was elected temporary chairman, and on motion of A. Lee Barrett, Peter Clay was elected Secretary. The house being in order, A. Lee Barrett moved that a Committee on Resolutions be appointed consisting of six committeemen.

A. Copley moved as an amendment that twelve be appointed, and after considerable discussion Mr. Barrett withdrew his motion and moved that the present organization be made complete, which carried unanimously. On motion of J. W. Harrison it was decided that the two candidates for representation, J. A. Payne and T. W. Newberry, should form lines in the public square and by a careful count ascertain the will of the party as to who should make the race. This was immediately done and after the lines were counted by men agreed upon, it was ascertained that a majority was in favor of T. W. Newberry, whereupon all returned to the Court House and the result was stated. Mr. A. Copley then moved that his nomination be made unanimous, which motion was submitted to the house, and nearly all voted in favor of it. T. W. Newberry, in a short eloquent speech, accepted the nomination and thanked the people for tendering it to him.

On motion of Peter Clay, John S. Patton was put in nomination for State Senator and was unanimously endorsed and instructed for. He made a short speech thanking the party for tendering him a position unsought, and agreeing to make the race if nominated by the District.

All good Democrats of Martin County are appointed delegates to attend the District Convention when and where they may be held for the purpose of nominating a Representative and State Senator, and instructing to cast the vote of Martin County as above indicated, for T. W. Newberry for Representative and J. S. Patton for State Senator; and in the event that none should attend, the Chairmen of both District Conventions are authorized to cast the vote of this County according to these resolutions. The meeting was the largest ever held in this County and all were sober and quiet, was well presided over by Col. Barrett, for which he received the warmest thanks of the house.

The local papers are requested to publish the proceedings.

On motion of Peter Clay the Convention adjourned.

JAMES A. BARRETT, Chm'n.

PETER CLAY, Secretary.

Northern capital is finding its way into Southern ores and coal, and into railway lines and timber. The means that next will come for agricultural lands and homes. Then citizenship and brotherly love will come tripping over the border and the grand old South with its memories of glory will rise up and say the fatted calf and the favor of barbecue and summer mint will be given to the land. The "bloody shirt" will go to the dime museum, and the "solid South" will continue to be the home of sunshine and flowers and of genuine hospitality and undisturbed Democracy.—Capital.

The widow of Vice President Hendricks passed a portion of last week in Washington, a guest of her cousin, Major Morgan. She is looking unusually well, despite her recent affliction, which she has learned to speak of without apparent pain. Incidentally it was learned that she is now bent primarily on the completion of her late husband's favorite projects among the Indiana people. These were not pretentious, but such as they were they will be finished. The work of editing many of Mr. Hendricks' speeches and writings his widow will also do, and in this she will have no superior. Throughout her entire life she was the late Vice President's most trusted advisor, knowing more of many of his interests than he did himself, and her own notes upon his private paper would alone be worth purchasing if published.—Philadelphia Times.

Democracy as exemplified in the organization which bears the name, may not in all times and in every feature of its operation harmonize with the opinions of the entire body of its followers. There is, however, a beauty and strength of principle at the foundation of the party which enables any defect in the super-structure easy of repair. Faith in stability of the underlying support enables the party to tolerate criticism, encourage experiment, and regard disappointment with equanimity. A party having for its basis some fanciful idea of political economy, originating in the brains of visionaries and carrying no semblance of practicality as a companion cannot, in the very nature of the case, be permanent. All parties based upon a special grievance real or imaginary. When the organization is accomplished, the party dies. The Democratic party for all times, for all emergencies and for all that is wise and good in government. Its faults are errors of judgment and not of constitution. Its vigor and health of principle speedily remedies any derangement of the system. It knows no class, save in recognizing a claim to protection. It spreads its beneficent influence over the entire people. It is beautiful because it is pure in principle, and safe companionship because it is just.—Capital.

The Democracy of Kentucky will on Saturday next give primary expression to their wishes touching the State Convention, which assembled in Louisville on the 4th of May. The cause has not been in all respects conducted as it should. Party animosities have led the respective friends of some of the gubernatorial candidates into indiscretions that were neither just, creditable, or helpful. Any one of the candidates for Governor is eminently worthy of the confidence of the Democracy, and would make a ruler of which the people of all parties would have no reason to be ashamed. They are all true Democrats, of high mental endowments, thoroughly capable, and in closest sympathy with the interests of the people and with the progressive spirit that is abroad in the land. Whatever may be the result of the May convention, it will be necessary in order to secure honoring success in August, that the nomination for all the offices be so obtained as to secure the hearty and cordial aid of the friends of all the candidates. The claim of every aspirant is entitled to the most respectful hearing, and before the convention should be accorded that generous treatment which is characteristic of representative Democracy. When decision is reached, it should be followed not only by prompt acquiescence on the part of the defeated and their friends, but it should invite a co-operation on their part that is both immediate and pleasing. The canvass will be heated this summer. The Republicans are making preparations for a fight that has not hitherto been witnessed. Much of their expectation is based upon wholly imaginary dissensions in the Democratic party, but which will be found dreams conceived in desperation and born of hallucinations. The Democracy of Kentucky are indivisible and invincible when marching under the party flag to the music of its conventional pledges. Let every Democrat give support to his favorite with might and main, but let him remember that rivalries which are both primary and inconclusive should be tempered with the strictest justice, if not savory of extravagant generosity.—Capital.

Who reads an advertisement?

Perhaps there is no part of a newspaper that is so undervalued as the advertising columns. People say, "Oh, who reads the advertisement?" Everybody reads them, dear reader. You read them, your neighbor reads them. Not all of them at one sitting. Only a little of them in any one paper, perhaps, but in the course of a year you read a great deal that is in the advertising columns, for "many a mickle makes a muckle." The general public is pretty well posted in the advertising columns of the papers.

It is the houses that advertise that flourish. If you don't believe it look around you. Business men understand this and hence, in live towns the newspaper is considered indispensable and is well sustained.—Leavenworth Times.

On this point of advertising the Chicago Inter-Ocean speaks some words of wisdom. It says:

"Business men in the thriving cities do not overestimate the benefits of judicious advertising. Every good advertiser in a town is more or less a benefactor to the whole people. It is not an unrequited occurrence for business men to come to the Inter-Ocean exchange room or send for exchanges, for the sole purpose of studying the life and enterprise of the various marts of trade, which they judge by the advertising columns of the local press. It is just such enterprising and business men who have built up Chicago, and they will benefit a community wherever found. What we mean by judicious advertising is not blow or bluster, but facts, which save buyers both time and money. In these days a city without advertisers is dead, and will stay dead, no matter what its wealth and resources may be."

A mass Convention of the Democracy of Lawrence county, Kentucky, is hereby called to meet at the Court House in Louisville on Saturday, April 23rd, at one o'clock p.m. for the purpose of appointing delegates to attend the State Convention, which will be held in the city of Louisville on the 4th day of May, 1887, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices, to be voted for at the next August election. All the Democrats of Lawrence county are invited to attend.
